

At Home in the Heartland: Forgotten Stories of How Iowans Got to Be 'Us' is a history project housed in a rebuilt school bus, offering programming to libraries, museums, schools. It tells the story of who Iowans have been from state's settlement 'til today; it looks at who we are now and asks who do we want to become. It is about change: What it is; what it costs; how we could steer it. It also collects Iowans' family histories and individual stories, presents and preserves them for use by all.

It will travel to all of Iowa's 99 counties between now and Election Day 2016—free to all who visit it.

The "BUS-eum" is sponsored by various Iowa educational, service or philanthropic organizations such as Humanities Iowa, Vander Haags Inc.; the Martha-Ellen Tye, John K. & Luise V. Hanson & Chester P. Luick Foundations; Scattergood School; local hosts and uncountable volunteers or other supporters.
